

HOW PHILLY MOVES

Call for Dancers

of every kind
(that's you!)

photographer JJ Tiziou wants to take your picture.

Participate in a public art project
celebrating the many facets of Philadelphia dance!

1. Let your movements be seen
2. Receive a photograph of yourself in motion
3. Have the possibility of being represented in a permanent art installation in the newly renovated SEPTA station at 46th & Market Streets.

Photo session dates:

Friday April 18th, evening
at Studio 34 (4522 Baltimore Ave)

Sunday April 27th, daytime
at the CEC (3500 Lancaster Ave)

Our goal is to create a permanent installation of photographs and sculpture representing the many dancers of Philadelphia.

Come and show us how you move!

register online and get more info at

www.HOWPHILLYMOVES.org

How Philly Moves is the working title for a proposed public art project by photographer Jacques-Jean Tiziou - www.jjtiziou.net
and sculptor James Peniston - www.jepsulpture.com

The project is one of five finalists under consideration for the SEPTA Art-In-Transit commission. Participants in the preliminary photo sessions will have access to the images created regardless of whether the project is funded or not.

HOW PHILLY MOVES

Call for Dancers

of every kind
(that's you!)

photographer JJ Tiziou wants to take your picture.

Participate in a public art project
celebrating the many facets of Philadelphia dance!

1. Let your movements be seen
2. Receive a photograph of yourself in motion
3. Have the possibility of being represented in a permanent art installation in the newly renovated SEPTA station at 46th & Market Streets.

Photo session dates:

Friday April 18th, evening
at Studio 34 (4522 Baltimore Ave)

Sunday April 27th, daytime
at the CEC (3500 Lancaster Ave)

Our goal is to create a permanent installation of photographs and sculpture representing the many dancers of Philadelphia.

Come and show us how you move!

register online and get more info at

www.HOWPHILLYMOVES.org

How Philly Moves is the working title for a proposed public art project by photographer Jacques-Jean Tiziou - www.jjtiziou.net
and sculptor James Peniston - www.jepsulpture.com

The project is one of five finalists under consideration for the SEPTA Art-In-Transit commission. Participants in the preliminary photo sessions will have access to the images created regardless of whether the project is funded or not.

HOW PHILLY MOVES

Call for Dancers

of every kind
(that's you!)

photographer JJ Tiziou wants to take your picture.

Participate in a public art project
celebrating the many facets of Philadelphia dance!

1. Let your movements be seen
2. Receive a photograph of yourself in motion
3. Have the possibility of being represented in a permanent art installation in the newly renovated SEPTA station at 46th & Market Streets.

Photo session dates:

Friday April 18th, evening
at Studio 34 (4522 Baltimore Ave)

Sunday April 27th, daytime
at the CEC (3500 Lancaster Ave)

Our goal is to create a permanent installation of photographs and sculpture representing the many dancers of Philadelphia.

Come and show us how you move!

register online and get more info at

www.HOWPHILLYMOVES.org

How Philly Moves is the working title for a proposed public art project by photographer Jacques-Jean Tiziou - www.jjtiziou.net
and sculptor James Peniston - www.jepsulpture.com

The project is one of five finalists under consideration for the SEPTA Art-In-Transit commission. Participants in the preliminary photo sessions will have access to the images created regardless of whether the project is funded or not.

HOW PHILLY MOVES

Call for Dancers

of every kind
(that's you!)

photographer JJ Tiziou wants to take your picture.

Participate in a public art project
celebrating the many facets of Philadelphia dance!

1. Let your movements be seen
2. Receive a photograph of yourself in motion
3. Have the possibility of being represented in a permanent art installation in the newly renovated SEPTA station at 46th & Market Streets.

Photo session dates:

Friday April 18th, evening
at Studio 34 (4522 Baltimore Ave)

Sunday April 27th, daytime
at the CEC (3500 Lancaster Ave)

Our goal is to create a permanent installation of photographs and sculpture representing the many dancers of Philadelphia.

Come and show us how you move!

register online and get more info at

www.HOWPHILLYMOVES.org

How Philly Moves is the working title for a proposed public art project by photographer Jacques-Jean Tiziou - www.jjtiziou.net
and sculptor James Peniston - www.jepsulpture.com

The project is one of five finalists under consideration for the SEPTA Art-In-Transit commission. Participants in the preliminary photo sessions will have access to the images created regardless of whether the project is funded or not.